The great Hermitage Museum overlooking the frozen River Neva

The great city of St Petersburg is a byword for grandeur and opulence. Built in 1703 by the westward looking Peter the Great as a symbol of Russia's growing status, it went on to become the Romanov's magnificent showcase capital. It lost its status as capital after the revolution, but some might argue in name only; St Petersburg still feels every bit the imperial city with its historic heart largely frozen in time.

Built around the Neva River and crisscrossed by canals linked by 342 bridges, St Petersburg is often known as the Venice of the North. Its historic centre is filled with canals lined by Italianate mansions and elegant plazas adorned with baroque and neoclassical palaces. It is also an almost unrivalled repository of culture and art, with its extraordinary galleries, museums, music venues and ballet.

St Petersburg is dazzling all year round but there is a special charm to the winter season. Five full days take you to some of the stunning historical, architectural and cultural highlights of this incomparable city. Stay in one of its most elegant historic hotels, situated in the heart of chic Nevsky Prospekt, and enjoy the finest food, wine and vodka offerings in the midst of a winter wonderland unlike anywhere else.

Belmond Grand Hotel Europe

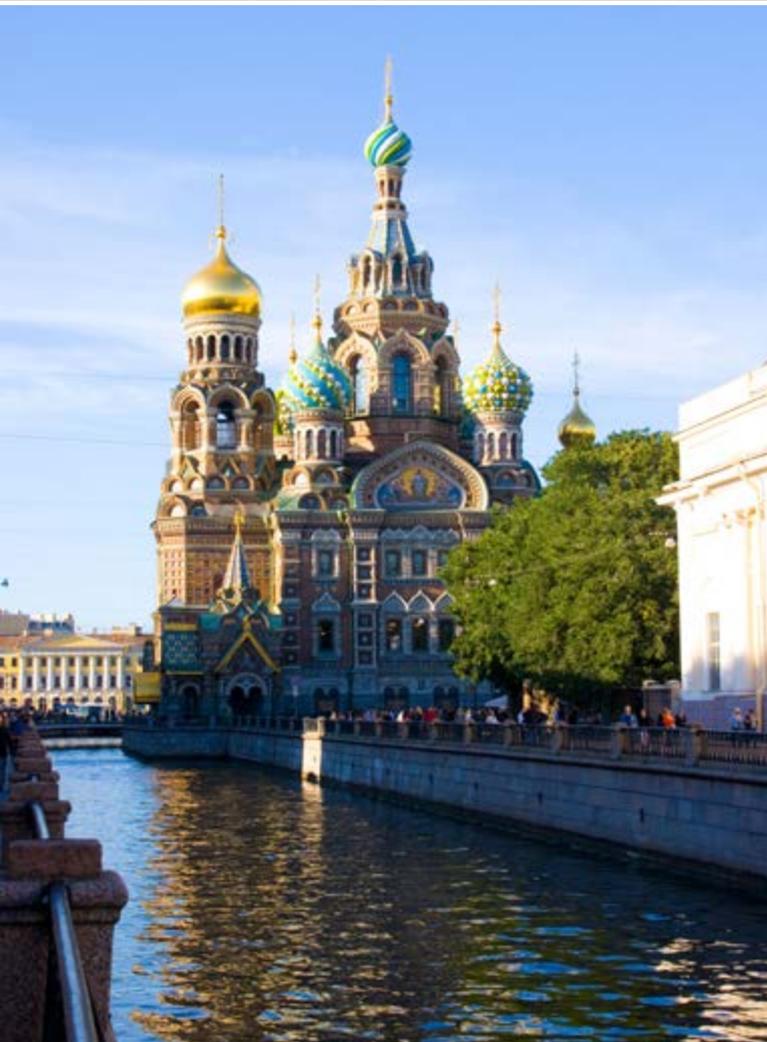

A truly grand historical hotel, the beautiful Belmond Grand Hotel Europe has enchanted Russia's high society for over a century from its prime location on Nevskiy Prospekt. Its magnificent interiors and architecture lend it a stately ambience which is punctuated by Art Nouveau flourishes, particularly in its gorgeous L'Europe restaurant, which is Russia's oldest continuously serving restaurant. The hotel has played a central role in the life of the city for 140 years and is an iconic building; particularly magical in the heart of winter when snow lies outside and a warm welcome awaits within. This luxury hotel provides four restaurants and bars – including the city's only dedicated Caviar Bar - a fitness centre with spa, sauna and plunge pool, and a beauty salon.
